VICTIMS ECONOMIC SECURITY AND SAFETY ACT (VESSA)

National Council of Jewish Women St. Louis' Persistence Results in Protections for Women, Children, and Families in Missouri

After eight years of resilience and dedication to the mission of improving the lives of women, children, and families, the National Council of Jewish Women St. Louis (NCJWSTL) is delighted that the Victims Economic Security and Safety Act (VESSA) has been signed into law by Governor Parson. VESSA allows victims of domestic violence up to 5 days of unpaid leave to handle the things they need to in order to leave their abuser without fear of losing their job. Thanks to the work of Senator Jill Schupp and former Senator Gina Walsh for championing the measure through the legislature.

10 years ago, NCJWSTL volunteer Marilyn Ratkin heard from connections in the community about the importance that attaining and maintaining economic independence played in the struggle for abused women to leave their abusers. Ratkin, along with NCJWSTL staff, met with agencies, researched potential solutions, and eventually did what NCJWSTL does best, they came up with both a volunteer service project and possible policy change that would help address the problem.

NCJWSTL, with Ratkin's leadership, launched Healing Hearts Bank, which made the first $500 loan to a woman leaving an abusive relationship in 2013. In that same year, NCJWSTL wrote and Senator Walsh introduced the Victims Economic Security and Safety Act. VESSA is a provision that requires employers to provide workplace safety accommodations to survivors of domestic violence. The workplace is often a place where perpetrators of domestic violence can abuse their victims, including showing up to the victim's place of work, flooding the victim with phone calls during work hours, and/or causing mayhem at the victim's workplace. Additionally, VESSA allows victims of sexual or domestic violence to take unpaid leave in order to access the court to secure orders of protection and custody arrangements, get mental and physical health care, develop safety plans, find new living arrangements, and further their safety and healing. Support by employers is especially crucial for victims of economic abuse, as many abuse tactics specifically target the workplace, stealing or withholding paychecks, and other methods of manipulation.

The Missouri Times provided this summation of the legislation, "Employers with at least 50 employees must grant two workweeks of unpaid leave while those with between 20-49 employees can grant at least one workweek per year. Individuals should give at least 48 hours' notice to take the time off (unless that is not possible) and could be asked to provide documentation such as a police report or records from an attorney or medical professional. Employees with family members who are victims of sexual or domestic violence are also included under this law. Leave can be taken to seek medical or mental health care, relocate temporarily or permanently, or obtain legal services, including preparing for or participating in court proceedings. Individuals who take leave must be reinstated to their position upon returning and should not lose any benefits."

As part of moving VESSA forward, NCJWSTL worked with a coalition of domestic violence service agencies including: St. Louis Ending Violence against Women Network (SLEVAWN), Safe Connections, St. Martha's Hall, MERS Goodwill Access Program, Mizzou Domestic Violence Clinic, Missouri Coalition Against Domestic and Sexual Violence (MCADSV), and many others. These organizations joined NCJWSTL over the years to provide testimony and to meet individually with legislators about the bill. No work is done alone, and this coalition helped move the needle every year to get VESSA closer to the governor's desk. They wrote letters, sent emails, and brought survivors to Jefferson City to testify and walk the halls to meet with legislators. Everyone knew this was a long process but one worth getting involved with and fighting for over the last 8 years. NCJWSTL was proud to take the lead in moving VESSA forward and the persistence of all of our members who testified over the years. They include Jennifer Bernstein, Amy Kuo Hammerman, Andrea Alper, Melissa Forrester, Dianna Fine, Ellen Alper, Heather Silverman, Senator Jill Schupp, and many more.

In 2015, an attorney for Legal Services of Eastern Missouri testified to the following in front of the Missouri Legislature, "A job is crucial for most women leaving a relationship involving domestic violence. Maintaining employment may mean the difference between having a home and food for a victim and the victim's children or having to return to the abuser in order to meet basic needs. The workplace protections of [VESSA] will ensure access to justice for many survivors of domestic violence by maintaining the job of those needing court, medical, or counseling services."

It took 8 years of advocating, educating, and volunteering, but on July 14, 2021 VESSA was finally signed by Governor Parson, ensuring that domestic violence victims in Missouri do not have to choose between making a living and being safe. The success of this effort is a testament to NCJWSTL's Theory of Change: Education + Advocacy + Community Service = Lasting Transformation in the lives of marginalized women, children, and families.

The other key piece to NCJWSTL's success is our members and volunteers. They lead the charge for change. We need you to join us. Reach out to Brooke Wallace today to learn how to get involved at 314.993.5181 or email her at bwallace@ncjwstl.org. Your voice is critical to continuing the success of changing policy in our state. In addition, make sure to know the issues, to build relationships with your elected officials, to get involved, to VOTE, to take action, and to educate yourself and others. Follow our timeline on the next page to see the steps we took to make this historic legislation happen.

**In December 2010, S's husband M assaulted her, causing her to break her hip. There was a subsequent criminal case that went on for an unknown length of time and required S to attend an unknown number of criminal court hearings. S became a client of the ALIVE program sometime during the year 2011 and, due to continued harassment, stalking and abuse by M, filed for an Order of Protection (OP) in February 2012 (appearance #1). The respondent, M, was served with her Ex Parte OP and they both appeared at the court date set for March 5, 2012 (appearance #2). At that time, M consented to the entry of a Full OP against him, which was issued for one year. In July 2012, M filed a Motion to Modify* the Full OP and a court date was set for July 16, 2012. S was able to file a request for a continuance due to her work schedule, which was granted and pushed the court date to July 23, 2012. The parties appeared on July 23 (appearance #3) and an amended Full OP was issued at that time. In October 2012, M filed another Motion to Modify the Full OP and a court date was set for October 22, 2012. S was not served with this matter so the case was continued from October 22 to November 5. The parties appeared on November 5 (appearance #4) and another amended OP was issued at that time. On November 7, 2012, M filed an OP against her and a court date was set for November 19. During the course of these court proceedings, M violated the terms of the OP by repeatedly contacting S and by not paying her the child support that was ordered. Consequently, S came to the courthouse and filed a Motion for Civil Contempt (for nonpayment of child support) on November 14, 2012 (appearance #5) and a Show Cause Order was issued to be served on M with a court date set for December 21, 2012. On November 19, 2012, the parties appeared on M's OP against S (appearance #6) and were here deliberating with the judge for over six hours before the case was eventually continued to December 17, 2012, for a hearing at M's request. The parties appeared on December 17 (appearance #7), at which time the case was again continued to January 14, 2013, for a hearing. The parties appeared on S's Civil Contempt motion on December 21, 2012 (appearance #8); however, M had not been served so this cause was continued to January 25, 2013. The parties appeared on January 14, 2013 (appearance #9), for the hearing on M's OP against S. They were here for a total of eight hours and M's OP was denied after a hearing. On that date, M was served with the Order to Show Cause on the Civil Contempt motion set for January 25. On January 25, S appeared (appearance #10) on her motion for Civil Contempt, but M failed to appear. The case was continued to February 8, 2013, so that the court could do further research on its ability to move forward with the Civil Contempt due to S's original OP being amended multiple times.*

\*It should be noted that all of M's Motions to Modify were for things such as retrieving belongings and being able to talk to S about specified (and unnecessary) issues.*
